BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

THE GOVERNOR.

Rolland H. Spaulding, Republican, governor of New Hampshire, was born in Townsend Harbor, Mass., March 15, 1873, the son of Jonas Spaulding, who was engaged in the lumber business there and later began the manufacture of fibre board on a small scale. The subject of this sketch attended Phillips Academy at Andover, Mass., graduating in the class of 1893. With his two brothers he then entered into business with his father. Eighteen years ago, they built a mill at Milton, this state, for the manufacture of fibre board and a few years later they began the erection of the very large plant at North Rochester, where are made fibre board, counters for shoes, chair bottoms and various other articles and novelties. Another large plant of the J. Spaulding & Sons Company is located at Tona-wanda, N. Y. Since the establishment of the North Rochester factory Rolland H. Spaulding has made his home there and, without seeking office or prominence of any sort, soon became known as one of the best and most public-spirited citizens of the state. He was one of the leaders and strong men of the Progressive movement in the Republican party in New Hampshire, but declined to enter the subsequent third party and was one of the delegates from New Hampshire to the Republican National Convention of 1912. In that year he was urged to become a candidate for governor, but declined, and in 1914 he entered the field only at the insistent request of those who saw in him the ideal party leader and chief executive. Once committed to the campaign, however, he waged it with vigor, and both his personality and his principles so appealed to the people that he was nominated in the September primary and elected on November 3 by decisive and flattering majorities. The vote of the state for governor was: Rolland H. Spaulding, Republican, 46,413; Albert W. Noone, Democrat, 33,674; Henry D. Allison, Progressive, 2,572; John P. Burke, Socialist, 1,423; scattering, 26.

HOOKSETT.—Arah W. Prescott, Republican; born in Bristol, February 20, 1834, seventh son of Josiah W. and Dorothy Levitt Prescott, and twin brother of the late Aran W. Prescott. When eight years of age, he was put out to work on a farm. The next year he entered the Hooksett woolen mill, working fourteen hours per day. At the age of eighteen, feeling the need of an education, he made an agreement with his father for his time, paying him therefor $160 during the next year. The next two years were spent in obtaining an education. At the age of twenty-two, he married Anna J. Ward of Hill. Three children were born to them. He entered the mills at Manchester, and soon rose to be overseer, which position he held until 1864. During this time he also taught an evening writing school for twelve years. He then commenced the butchering business, carrying it on for two years, and then reëntered the mill, taking charge of several different rooms, both woolen and cotton. He invented and set to running the first self-operating "Jack of the Rouse" mule, selling the improvement to the company. He had bought wild land and built a set of buildings in South Hooksett, and in 1870 he left the mills and went there to reside. Soon after removing to South Hooksett, he engaged in the wood, lumber and real estate business and has continued it since. Aside from wood, lumber, real estate, and farming, he has embarked in other business. At one time he bought the patent right to lay concrete in Albany, N. Y., and operated it there. Was also in the laundry business in Manchester. He bought out J. S. Cole and carried on the tallow and tripe business. He also acted as agent and operated the New Hampshire Granite Company's quarry. He gave the land and built Arah Street, reaching from the State Road in Hooksett to Union Street in Manchester, nearly one mile. He has built over fifty houses.

He built a brick public library building, and gave it to his own town. He was superintendent of the Sunday School for many years. He has been an Odd Fellow for fifty years and has passed the chairs; is a member of Amoskeag Grange; a member of the Old Resident Association in Manchester; a member of the Union Hall Society. He never used tobacco in any form, and never drank a glass of liquor at a bar, being a thorough-going temperance man. He reared two children, a son and a daughter; the son being educated at Pembroke Academy and the daughter at the Manchester High School. His father and mother were remembered by the erection of a granite monument over their graves. He is a member of the First Universalist Church in Manchester, and has been president of the same. He has been treasurer of the Universalist State Convention. He was a member of the Constitutional Convention in 1885 and a member of the Legislature in 1895-96. His religious belief is something like this: He believes in the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man and that God looks out upon the whole human family as a mother looks out upon her children; they are all His. There is no such thing as the forgiveness of sin—every violator must suffer the consequences. The wrath spoken of has reference to God's divine laws, not disposition; this is love and never changes. Christ did not come to suffer for you, or for my, sins. He came as a discoverer of a truth and that the world might know that truth. He was willing to labor, sacrifice, and, if need be, die, that he might give this truth to the world. There may be one feeding on husks in thought with a tableful of good things. Mr. Prescott was a member of the school board, and selectman of his town, a justice of the peace for the state of New Hampshire for years. His first wife passed on in January, 1900. Almost Three Million Dollars go out of New Hampshire annually for life insurance. As a matter of self-interest on the part of tax-payers, business men and citizens of the State generally, this vast sum should be kept at home.

The United Life and Accident Insurance Company of New Hampshire is a State institution; its Officers and Directors are well-known citizens of the State; it is chartered by the State, licensed by the State, governed by the State, and is required to keep on deposit with the State securities sufficient to guarantee the payment of every policy in force. In addition to this absolute protection, United Life Policies are the very latest and the most attractive in every valuable feature.

Therefore, keep your premiums at home to build up a HOME institution, and at the same time secure the safest and best there is to be had in modern life and accident insurance.
